The President Enthusia stically Received by the Citizens of Both States.

ST. JOE, ATCHISON AND TOPEKA VISITED.

A Grand Ovation Tendered the Chief Magistrate at the latter Place -A Monster Parade of Veterans.

Archison, Kan., Oct. 10 .- The president arose early this morning, and as St. Joseph was approached he and his party had only time to hastily take a cup of coffee before entering the city. At theur ion depot an immense crowd was assembled. Conspicuous in the assemblage was Custer post of the Grand Army of the Republic, which, drawn up is line, made a passage way for the president and his party and acted as their escort until a neighboring hotel was reached, where a public reception was

As the president and Secretary Tracy appeared on the baleony in front of the hotel, peared on the balcony in front of the hotel, Colonel A. C. Dawes, general passenger agent of the Hannibal & St. Joseph railroad, introduced them in a short speech, which was received with cheers by the crowd. "My fellow citizens," said the president, "if you are glad to see me at this hour in the morning; if you are so kind and demonstratiove before breakfast, how great would have been your welcome if I could have come a little later in the day. [Applause.] I beg to thank you, who at so much monvenience at this early hour, have turned inconvenience at this early hour, have turned out to speak these words of welcome to us as we pass through your beautiful city. I am glad to have this morning a brief and imperfect opportunity to look upon it. Many years ago I read of St. Joseph. I know something of its history, when, instead of being a railroad city, it was a place for outfitting those slow and toilsome trains that bore the early piencers towards California and the far west. Those days were days not to be despised. Those means of commumeation were slow, but they bere men and women full of courage and patriotism to defor us on the Pacific cost and in the great west a work of peaceful conquest that has added greatly to the glory and prosperity of our country. And yet we congratulate ourselves that these swifter means of communication have taken the place of the old; we congratulate ourselves that old; we congratulate ourselves that these conveniences, both of business and of social life, have come to crown our day. And yet, in the midst of them, enjoying the lux-uries which modern civilization brings to our doors, let us not lose from our household those plain and stordy virtues which are es-sential to true American citizenship. Let us remember always that above all surroundings, above all that is external, there are to be prized those solid and essential virtues that make home happy, that make our country great, and that enable as in every time of trial and necessity, to call out from among her people some who are fit to lead our armies or to meet every emergency in the history of "We are here as American citizens, not as partisans; we are here as com-rates of the late war, or, if there are those who, under the other banner, fought for what seemed to them to be right, we are here to say one and all, that God knew what was best for this country when he cast the issue in favor of one union and constitution.

[Applause and cheers.] Now, again united under its ampleguarantee of personal liberty and public security; united again under one flag, we have started forward, if we are true toour we have started lowering to which to be investigations, upon a career of prosperity that would not otherwise have been possible. Let us therefore, in devotion to the right, as God shall give us light to see it, go forward in the discharge of our duties, setting above everything else the flag, the constitution and the law upon which all our rights and all our securities are based. [Applause] Now, comrades of the Grand Army of the Repuband fellow citizens of Missouri. thank you and bid you good bye.

At the conclusion of the president's remarks, the party retired to the rotunda of the depot, where the president shook hands the depot, where the president smook hands with the crowd as they filed through.

Joseph amid the cheering of the crowd. The run to Atchison crowd. The run to Atchison was made without incident beyond the justy cheers of the crowds at the depots as the train went by en route for this city. Atchi son was reached at 8:45, where a large crowd was assembled.

The President at Topeka. TOPEKA, Kan., Oct. 10. - The stop at Atchison was but a brief one and the president did not leave his car. He was almost buried beneath flowers showered upon him by the school children assembled at the depot. Chief Justice Horton of the Kansas supreme court welcomed the president to the state, and the latter, in response, made a few remarks and introduced Secretary Tracy just as the train pulled out.

Before reaching Topeka several small towns were passed through and in each was the usual enthusiastic crowd of people. At 10:30 the train pulled into the depot at Topeka amid the cheers of the vast multitude. Senator Ingalls received the party at this point. The president was escorted to the statehouse by Governor Humphrey and his staff and there reviewed the immease parade as it marched by. It took over two hours for the president to review the many thousands that marched past him in front of the capitol. The procession was headed by five companies of United States cavalry, followed by the state guards, Sons, of Veterans and the Kansas organizations of the Grand Army of the Republic.

This is the occasion of the largest remion of old soldiers that Kansas has ever seen, and fully thirty thousand were in the parade. As a large body of illinois veterans passed the president Rev. Alien Buckner, "the fighting parson," cried:

"Let Illinois, the home of Lincols, the home of Grant, the home of Legan, give three cheers for the president of the United States," and they were given with a vim.

As the Indiana contingent passed by, in which were many of the president's former brigade, the enthusiasm knew no bounds. Among the Indiana old seldiers many were recognized by the president who greated day were gained by the Illinois soldiers, who furnished the largest contingent in the linof march. This honor was evidenced by the presentation of a beautiful banner. In the rear of the veterans came marching students from the state normal school at Em-poria and other colleges, the Tepeka high school andwardschools and parochial sch

The party then proceeded to the fair grounds, where the address of welcome was delivered by the governor.

The president responded at considerable length, thanking the governor and citizens of Kansas for the generous welcome tendered him, and expressed his gratification at the evidences of prosperity on every hand. To the old veterans he said that he was pleased more than he could express to see them present in such large numbers and hoped many years might yet crown the brave defenders of the union. The president further said: "Who can look upon this vast array of soldiers, who fought to a victorious consummation the war for the union, without bowing his head and his heart is grateful reverence. [Great applause] Who can look upon these Sons of Veterans, springing from a patriotic ancestry, full of the spirit of 1861, and coming into the vigor and strength

IN MISSOURI AND KANSAS, of manhood to take up the burdens that we must soon lay down, and who, turning from these to the sweet-faced children, whose bands are filled with flowers and flags, can fail to feel that these institutions of lib can fail to feel that these institutions of liberty are secure for two generations at least. [Great cheering.] I never knew until today the extent of the lajury which the state of Kansas had inflicted upon the state of Indiana—[laughter and cheers]—never until I looked upon that long line of Indiana soldiers that you plucked from us when the war was over by the superior inducements of your fields and cities effered to the ambitious toller. Indiana grieves for their loss, but rejoices in the homes of prosperity they have found here. Cheering. They are our proud contribution to that great sational reputation which your state has established as a friend as well as one of the bulwarks of liberty and law. [Cheers.] It was not unnatural that they, coming back from the scenes where comrades had shed their blood for liberty, should choose to find homes in a state that had the baptism of martyrs' blood upon its

had the baptism of mariyrs' blood upon its infant brow. (Prolonged cheering.) The future is safe if we are but true to oursetves, true to these children whose instruction is committed to us. There is no other for that can at all obstruct or hinder our enward progress except treason in our midst, treach-ery to the great fundamental principle of our cy to the great fundamental principle of our government, which is obelience to law. The will of the majority, expressed in orderly, constitutional methods, is the only king to which we bow. [Prolonged cheers.] But to him all must bow. Let it be understood in all your communities that no selfish interest of individual, no class interests, however enterne hed, shall be permitted to assert their convenshall be permitted to assert their conven-lence against law. Cries of "Good, good," and cheering. This is a good American de-trine, and if it can be made to prevail in all the states of the union until every man se-cure under the law in his own right is compelied by law to yield to every other man his rights nothing can shake our repose. [Cheers. rights nothing can shake our repose. (Cheers) There is some grumbling in Kansas, and I think it is because your advantages are too great. [Laughter] A single year of disappointment in agricultural returns should not make you despair of the future or tempt you to unsafe expedients. Life is made up of averages, and i think yours will show a good average. [Cries of "Good, good," and cheers.] Let us look forward with hopes, with courage fidelity, thrift, patience, good neighborly hearts and patriotic love for the flar. Kansas and her people have an assured and happy future." [Prolonged cheers.]

At the conclusion of the president's address there were loud cries for Senatoringalls, who was compelled to respond. In the course of his speech one corner of the speaker's sland began settling from the great mass of humsoity on it and President Har-stand began settling from the great mass of humsnity on it and President Harrison wamed Senator Ingalls that it was going. Women and men rapidly vacated the stand, thus relieving the pressure. "This is the second platform," said Senator Ingalls, "that I have broken downsince I have come heme. Who will doubt that I am a man of weight!"

At Lecompton the president was cheered andly by a large crowd. No further stops vere made until the train reached Lawrence. There another large assemblage greeted the president and the school children added to president and the school children added to the welcome by a profusion of bouquets and the waving of flags. The president excused himself from speaking more than a few words after having talked to all the rest of the people in Kansas at Topeka. He had sup-posed until the train came into Lawrence that the entire citizenship of the state was in the immense growd convenient at Topeka the immense crowd congregated at Topeka today. He reminded the people that all the inspiration connected with the stery of the early history of Kansas clusters around the city of Lawrence, and was sure that they would find in that story the inspiration and suggestion that will keep the cause of liberty ever near their hearts. [Great applause.]

At Kansas City. Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 10.-The presiden tial train arrived here at 5:45 under escort of Hon. William Warner, Mayor Holmes and other distinguished gentlemen and a committee. The president and party were driven around the city somewhat and finally taken to the Coates house, Here amagnificent banquet was tendered the president, Secretary Trucy, the president's brother, John S. Harrison, and the remainder of the presidential party. Before the conclusion of the banquet the president retired to visit the residence of his brother. He is a much younger man than the dent, and, strange to say ident, and, strange to say, is a democratic politicism. Before leaving the president spoke briefly, excusing himself, saying in conclusion that he hoped all their dreams for Kansay City may be realized. After his return from the residence of his

after and make two speeches, one in McKin-ley's district, either at Canton or Alliance, and the other in Judge Taylor's district, probably at Warren. He remarked that he had been an xious to go from the beginning of the campaign: that he felt like taking a hand in the fight all over the country, and unless the president objected or something occurred to detain him here he would certainly go. His principal topic of discussion will be re-ciprocity, and he will show that there is nothing in that policy to conflict at all with the republican doctrine of protection.

THE BASEBALL CONFERENCE.

Spaulding Talks in a Conciliatory

Way to the Meeting. New York, Oct. 10 .- [Special Telegram to THE BEE.]-- The delegates to the National Baseball league convention went into session again this morning at the Fifth Avenue hotel to hear the report of the committee which conferred last evening with committees from the Players' league and American association, There was a full attendance of the National league proper.

A. J. Spaulding in conversation today said that there was a disposition on the part of the National league people to look at this matter of a union from a fair business standpoint and if they can arrive at some solution they are all disposed to sacrifice something for the good of the baseball busi-ness. He said they wished to bring baseball back to its former glory. Mr. Spaulding de clared that the National league people realize that there is a sort of public press among baseball goers to bring this work to a close and they are going to assist in this good work. They do not favor any temporary ar-rangement, but want something permanent. At present they have no idea of what will be done, but suggestions will be 'made and re-ceived between now and October 22, at which

Chairman Blake says substantially the same, and hinted that there was a "hitch" between the committee and Burrows. He states that the action was taken because Van Wyck had taken the stump for Harlan as against the independent candidate, and because of the fact, which the committee claims to have learned, that Van Wyck read his speecies, at republican head-quarters before he delivered them. Swindling the Farmers

FREMONT, Neb., Oct. 10 .- [Special to THE BEE.]-Two or three weeks ago a trio of confidence men were heard of in this county opcrating among the farmers. Their plan was for two of them to go together to a farmer's, ostensibly to purchase his farm. While they would be entertaining the honest granger with negotiations for the purchase of his homestead, a third man, an accomplice of the other two, would come along. In each instance he had just returned home from a trip to St. Louis, where he had learned a good trick by which he could invariably win on a bet. His two partners would bite at his game and beat him. It was then time to inveigle the unsuspecting farmer into the trap. When he would bet, of course he would lose. It is not known bet, of course he would lose. It is not known how extensively these fellows operated or how many victims they found. It has just leaked out, however, that at least one farmer lost his roll, for he placed his case in the hands of the county sheriff, who is endeavoring to trace up the swindlers.

JUSTICE MILLER STICKEN.

The Distinguished Jurist Suffers an Attack of Paralysis.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10. - This afternoon Justice Samuel F. Miller of the supreme court of the United States was stricken with paralysis and is now in a series condition, though resting comfortably, and his mind is clear. Justice Miller was returning from the supreme court room to his residence about twenty-five minutes to 3 o'clock. He was on the west side of Thomas street, within sight of his residence, No. 415 Massachusetts avenue. John Woodford, his servant, who was standing in the doorway of the house, saw the justice approaching. Then he was startled at seeing him sudtlenly raise his hand to his heart, then reel and fall on the cartracks, which he was crossing at the time. Woodford hastened to the spot and found the justice speechless and apparently in a stupor. He at once secured a coupe from a neighboring back stand and with assistance placed the suffering man in it and had him borne to his room. Dr. Cook, who resides in the neighborhood, and Dr. Lincoln, who fortunately was passing at the time, were soon in attendance at the bedside. They found the whole left side of the justice was paralyzed, but he was still able to recegnize those about him.

Thinking it was a sudden return of rheumatics, which he had often hereturn of rheumatics which he had often be-fore felt, he made another effort to step forward and as he did so either tripped on the car track or slipped and fell forward on his face and left side and arm, at the same time cutting his forehead slightly and causing an abrasion of the skin on the nose. John Woodward, the justice's servant, was standing near him at the time, and saw him fall. He immediately ran to his assistance, and, with the help of some bystanders, raised the juage to his feet, and, helping him into a cab, soon conveyed him to his home. An improvised stretcher was brought out and, though the juage protested against being placed on it, as he said he was perfectly able, with assistance, to walk, he at last conat the same time cutting his forehead slightly ing placed on it, as he said he was perfectly able, with assistance, to walk, he at last consented, and was taken gently up the terrace leading to the house and into his office on the first floor. An Embezzling Hotel Clerk. New York, Oct. 10 .- | Special Telegram to THE BEE.]-Detective Heidelberg of Inspector Byrnes' staff arrived from Montreal this afternoon with William E. Whalen, ex-cashier of the Hoffman house, whom he had captured in that city. Whalen is accused of having embezzled some of Mr. Stokes' money. The latter told Inspector Byrnes two months ago that he was being systematically robbed by one of his employes, but that he had no suspicion against any individual. Then detectives were detailed to work up the case. They discovered early in their search that Whalen, who has been in Mr. Stokes' employe for three years, and in receipt of a com-fortable salary, was adjected to horse racing, and had the usual faculty of picking out wrong horses. Thus his tosings were much wrong horses. Thus his tosings were much greater than his salary seemed to warrant, and detectives watched him closely. Just about this time a guest placed $10,000 in the safe. The next morning he found it was short $150. A New Joint Rate Order.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 10.-[Special to THE BEE,]—Sometime ago it was announced that the attorney general had the papers all ready to file in the district court for the beginning of suits against railway companies which had refused to obey the joint rate law. An anxious public waited for the filing of hose papers, but they were never filed. The ause for this failure is now made public by the publication yesterday of a new joint rate order, to take effect. October 25. It is simi-lar to the last one, making the joint rate 80 per cent of the maximum schedule now in orce, but is corrected to cure a legal defect in the last previous order. Meanwhile a hum-ber of the more prominent roads have signifled their willingness to obey the law, and it is thought but little, if any, trouble will be Bire and Hon. J. O. Cramb: HON. J. O. CRAMB'S SPEECH.

Review of the Republican Party's Record in Nebraska.

Hon. J. O. Cramb spoke as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen: I must confess to feeling of a little embarrassment in standnu for the first time before au audience of this character as a candidate for a public office. I am something over fifty years old, and though I have been solicited frequently in the years past to allow my name to be presented as a candidate, I have always re-fused, and I suppose tonight I owe it to the farmers' alliance that I have been nominated hough not by them. I had been a constant reader of the Iowa Homestead for a number of years, which is a strong alliance paper, and also a non-partisan alliance paper, and I thought with many others that the formation of the ailiance for the mutual penefit of the farmers, to study the principles of farming and the best methods of farming and all interest involved in and connected with farming, would certainly be a very good thing, and also to be interested unitedly upon any legislation that might be for the interests of the farmer, And at the time 1 joined, and for some little time afterwards I had no idea whatever of its assuming the phase it has in whatever of its assuming the phase it has in this state.

I supposed they would seek to secure the nomination of such men as they desired by the oid parties and that they would receive the help of the old parties in patting them into effice, and white I was a member of the county alliance as a delegate from our home alliance they solicited me to become a candidate. I did not wish to do so, and, is fact, declined, but they insisted and I consented. I also teld some of my republican friends that if they desired I would become the candidate, through the alliance, of the republican party for the legislature. We had the county alliance and passed resolutions that I could accept, and did accept, and we appointed a meeting two weeks later, at which the candidates were selected, and all preliminary steps taken to present them to the conventions. the conventions, the republican convention in particular. But when we met in that con-vention two weeks later ten Knights of Labor were invited to come in and act with us, and the first thing done in that convention was to the first thing done in that convention was to vote down our resolution, and pass a resolution in its reply of today states that there is nothing to compel the road to furnish care beyond the average demand, and expresses a determination to investigate the statement that the present supply is an average one.

DES MOINES, Ia., Out. 10—[Special Telegram to The Bee.]—Harry Shelledy, a young railroader, was dangerously stabbed by a stranger. had just as much right to say that I must leave the Methodist church, of which I have been a member forty years, as to say that I must leave the republican party. It was my honorable privilege to vote for General John C. Fremont when he ran for president in 1856, and it has been my privilegs ever since that to vote for every republican president that has been elected. [Applause]. And having had no axes to grind, and therefore not having had no axes to grind, and therefore not having had my toes trod upon by the republican party or any other party in that time, I became strongly attached to the principles of the republican party, and believed then and now that they are the nearest correct political principles that there are on this continent. [Appiause]. I came out of that alliance and made up my mind that I would accept no office whatever, but the republicans said to me, "Wo ever, but the republicans said to me, "We have been counting on you; we have no one else but these lawyers, and it will not do to run them because the farmers have reached such a state of feeling that it will not do to run them." Then I said, "All right; I will do the best I can," and for that reason I am the candidate of the republican party, for these two counties, for the state legislature, It is a very difficult thing for me to go

It is a very difficult thing for me to go around among the people and buttonhole them and ask them to vote for me, but for the sake of the party, and for the reason that I think I have as deep an interest as any one can in the welfare of the furmer, I would like to get there. [Applaise.]

If there is any way by which the condition of the agricultural people of this state can be benefitted by legislation I want to know what it is, and would like to have a hand in making it, under the circumstances; but I feel as though the alliance had taken a step that will eventually result badly for it, from the very fact that you can not unite farmers in a political or-ganization any more than you can any other class of men; they differ just as widely, and cling sometimes to their views just as tennelously. I know in our county alliance when this question was being discussed there was one party on this side of the house favor-ing one side and another party on the above was one party on this side of the house favor-ing one side and another party on the other side of the house favoring the other, just as far apart as they could be. And I said to them: "Suppose you were in the legislature and this side of the house demanded this, that and the other, and the other side of the house were continually opposed to your measures, how could you accomplish anything t are you going to stand firm in your positions and accomplish nothing, or can you not compromise and do something! We cannot afford to stand in our own way, and if we can't get all we want or all we feel we ought to have, why get something that will benefit us and some other time get something more."? leannot make the alliance think as I do and reannot make the alliance think as I do and we stand just as we do today.

The resolution which the alliance of our county, and I think generally the alliances throughout the state, have adopted, is not the resolution of the northern alliance, but the resolution of the southern alliance. I want to read a few statements from the lower allegated the solution of the southern alliance. Homestead, the editor of which I think is well posted in alliance matters. He says this in reply to somebody who calls all alliances, north, south and everywhere, "tho Alliance."

For several years there have been various farm organizations in the south known as the Texas alliance, the Hill Industrial union, the Farmers' and Laborers' union, and we don't year many of these organizations met in St. Louis, Mo. and consolidated, forming what is now known as the "Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union." This is what our purblind contemporary calls "the alliance." It has no connection whatever with the alliance, "It has no connection whatever with the alliance, which is a secret seelety and operates from Washington, pays its officers, who live in Washington, high salaries and aims to unite the farmers in a political combination that will make its officers the dictators' of American politics, itence, whenever it has obtained a footbold it organizes. The Farmer's Party," or The People's Party."

What I object to is to have a resolution and

What I object to is to have a resolution and declaration of principles coming from the south and have me to endorse it, when the whole object and aim is to put some of these rascals into power who can't get there any

Here is what he says about the Northern Operative farmers only are eligible to membership. It does not favor the policy of arraying the farmers as a class against other classes. It works through the present political parties when it wants any work done. Outside of certain reform measures that come up from day to day, it has no interest in politics.
